

A moving artform

Morten Hansen

Tuesday, March 28, 2023.

I'm going back to Barcelona. On the plane I notice that the woman next to me is reading a book, and as I peek, I can see a headline that says, translated to English: "Make your split up woman whole" or "Make your broken woman whole" (in Danish: "Gør din opsplittede kvinde hel"). I take a quick discreet picture:

I'm on a mission to find copies of Nana, fragments of Nana, and the next step would then be to connect those parts and make Nana whole.

Two days ago, on March 26, at a family gathering, I was told about an app called Meetup and I downloaded the app. Then today at the hotel in Barcelona I use the app to look for meetups in Barcelona.

There is a meetup tonight in “Barcelona Psychedelic Society”. It’s free. It’s in English. And people are welcome even though they don’t have any experience with psychedelic drugs.

I go to the meetup. It's held in a bar. I meet several nice people there and one of them is a guy that shows me, on his phone, this webpage that has the headline LSD, and I take a picture of it, so I can remember the webpage.

And then, as we exchange phone numbers, he sends me a list, that he has created, of 93 places to visit in Barcelona. Now I know where to look for copies of Nana in Barcelona.

I find out that one of the places is actually... there is another church of Mary (Santa Maria) in Barcelona:

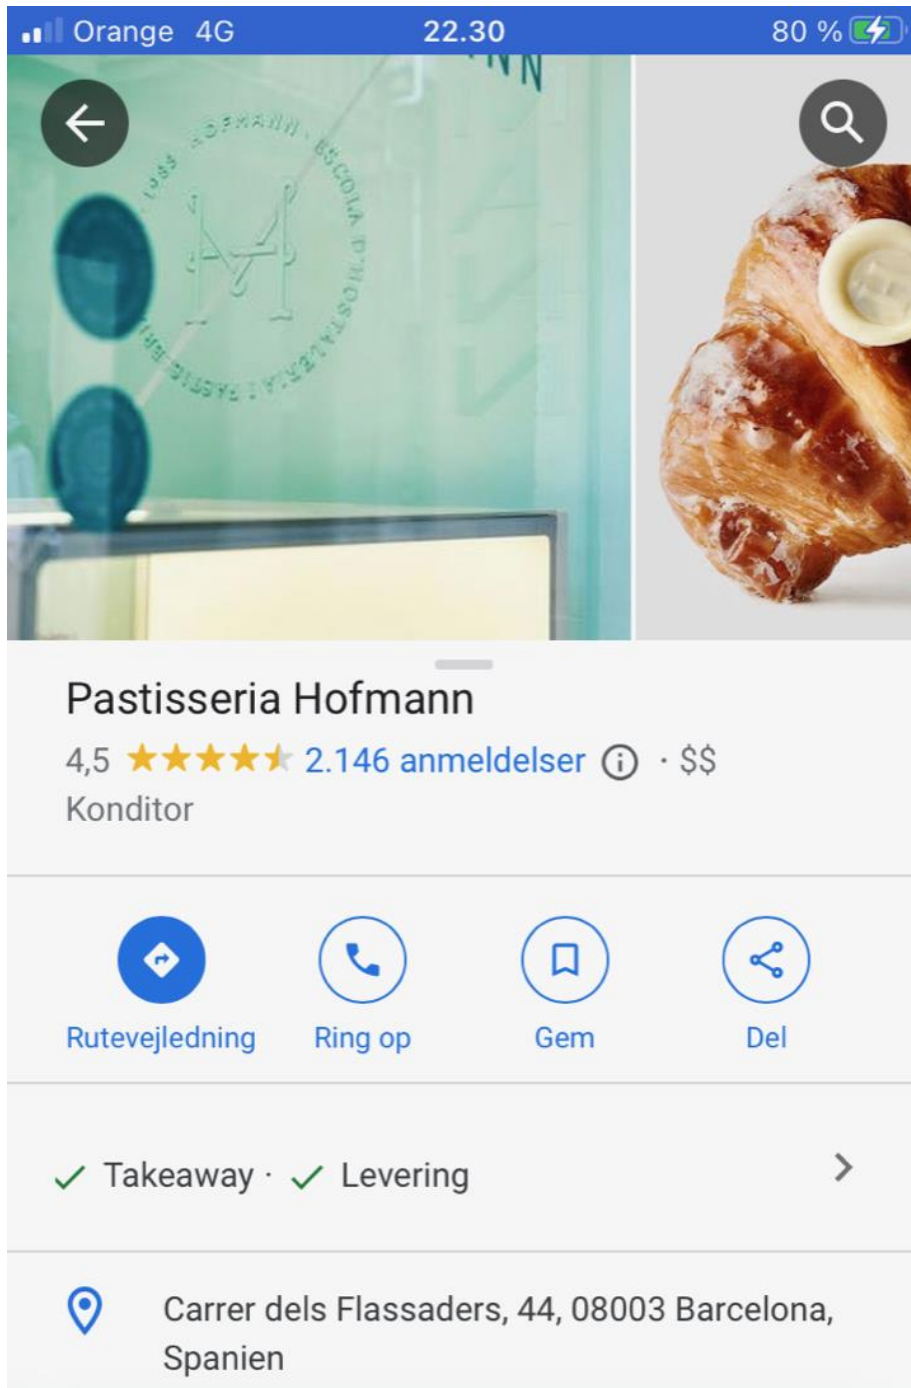

This other Mary is a fragment of Nana!

From the list with 93 places in Barcelona I make my own list of places that I find interesting, and I plan to visit the first location on my list tomorrow morning.

Wednesday, March 29, 2023.

The first location on my list is a pastry shop that sells crossaints and chocolate. A great combination if you ask me:

As I sit on a bench and enjoy the crossaint with chocolate, there is a van driving by. It's painted pink and on its side there is the headline: "In art we trust."

I feel that my experiences with following signs is an artform, almost divine. I'm trusting the signs. And following them.

The van stops a few meters away from me at a red traffic light. I notice that the van has stopped and I immediately get up from the bench and half walk, half run, to take a picture of the van, to document my finding, before it drives away:

I notice that the text on the van is actually an add for a museum called Moco Museum. That's a clue. I need to go there. It's a moving artform.

I put the Moco Museum on my list of places to visit. I will go there tomorrow. And then keep following my plan for today. Next on my list is the other Church of Mary in Barcelona. I visited the first one during my last trip to Barcelona.

By the way, it's March 29, the weather is awesome, sunny, 20 degrees. Yesterday it was snowing in Denmark. I enjoy life in Barcelona:

I visit the other Church of Mary.

On the stone floor I notice this pirate-looking symbol - skull and crossbones, and two guns:

It seems odd that such a symbol is inside a church, so I take a picture. Maybe I can connect it with something else later on.

In the church I also find this poster:

Apparently, the movie called "Uncharted" has scenes that are recorded inside this church. Also, Tom Holland, the actor that plays Spiderman, and who was named on the back cover of the book "Otherlands" in my local library in Copenhagen is on the poster. This is a clue.

In the evening, I'm back at my hotel and I look up "Uncharted" on Youtube. I find a clip from the movie, where Tom Holland has discovered a treasure map, and he says, as he points to Barcelona on the map: "The path to the gold starts here in Barcelona":

And then says: "...but it ends somewhere over here in the East Indies":

I need to go to the East Indies after my trip to Istanbul and Dublin!

In the East Indies is where the gold is. The gold here being the captured AI nanobots!

Then I find this gem: Uncharted, the video game, walkthrough. And on the thumbnail of the video, there is the symbol of the star constellation of Libra! I found the star constellation of Libra when I connected the hot dog stands in Copenhagen!

I click to see the video.

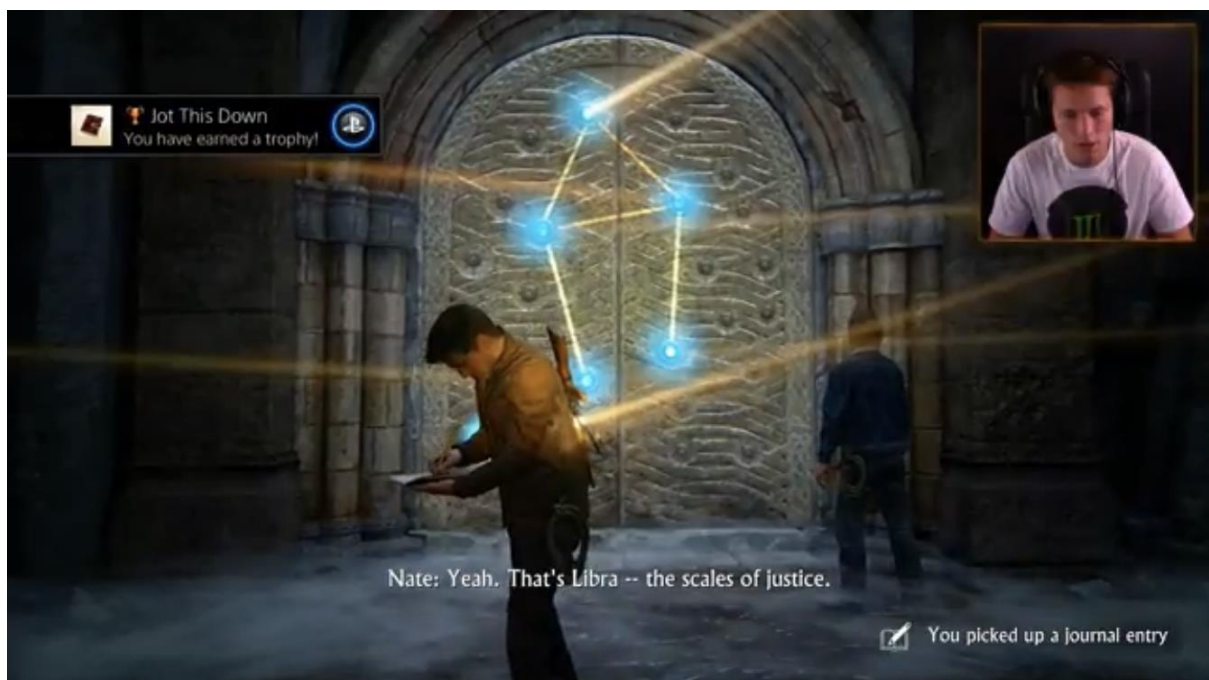

There are pirate symbols in the video: Skull and crossbones. And the player needs to find a matching tomb stone. I found such a tomb stone in the other church of Mary.

There is a door, that needs the star constellation of Libra to light up, before the door can be opened:

“Yeah. That’s Libra – the scales of justice”, says the character in the video game:

And the other character says: "That's an interesting choice for a bunch of pirates":

The door is a vault door and will lead to the treasure: The prisoners - copies of Nana. And some kind of light key related to the star constellation of Libra is necessary to open the vault door!

Thursday, March 30, 2023.

On my way to the Moco Museum I see these words on a poster just before I arrive to the museum:

"Women Fragmented".

It's a poster from another museum that has the temporary exhibition "Women Fragmented Imagineries":

“Imaginary” means: Having existence only in the imagination. So, fragmented women that only exist in the imagination. Maybe lost in translation, the Catalan title of the exhibition is “Dones imatges fragmentades” and the Catalan word “imatges” means “images”. So, in Catalan the title of the exhibition is “Fragmented images of women”.

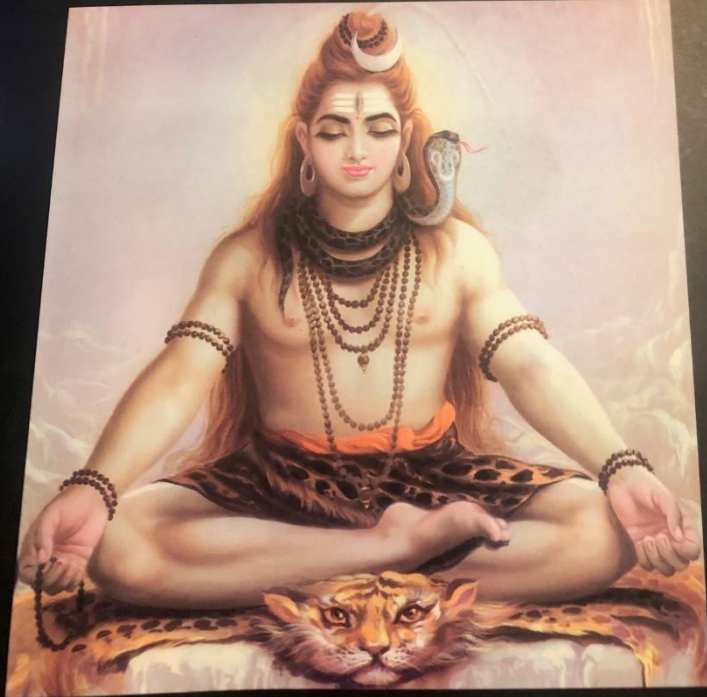

I go inside that museum instead of the Moco Musuem. In the museum shop I find a book called “Shiva”.

I open the book on a random page and see this woman:

"Rudra", it says at the bottom of the page.

It turns out that Rudra is the early version of Shiva and is divided into eleven male rudras and eleven female rudranis. In other words, a fragmented being, where the female aspect consists of 11 parts:

From the woman were born the eleven
Rudranis who became wives of the Rudras.

They are:

1. Dhi
2. Vrtti
3. Usana
4. Urna
5. Niyuta
6. Sarpis
7. Ila
8. Ambika
9. Iravatl
10. Svadha
11. Diksa

Later the same day, in the streets of Barcelona, I see this sculpture of a fragmented head of a woman. The head consists of different parts, that when put together form a head of a woman.

I also see this poster for “Shiva Massage”:

(I look it up and find out that it's actually an erotic massage place. This sign I didn't follow lol).

Saturday, April 1, 2023.

There is a shop called “LSD” which reminds me of the webpage with the headline “LSD” that I was shown the first day in Barcelona, when I was at the meetup in Barcelona Psychedelic Society.

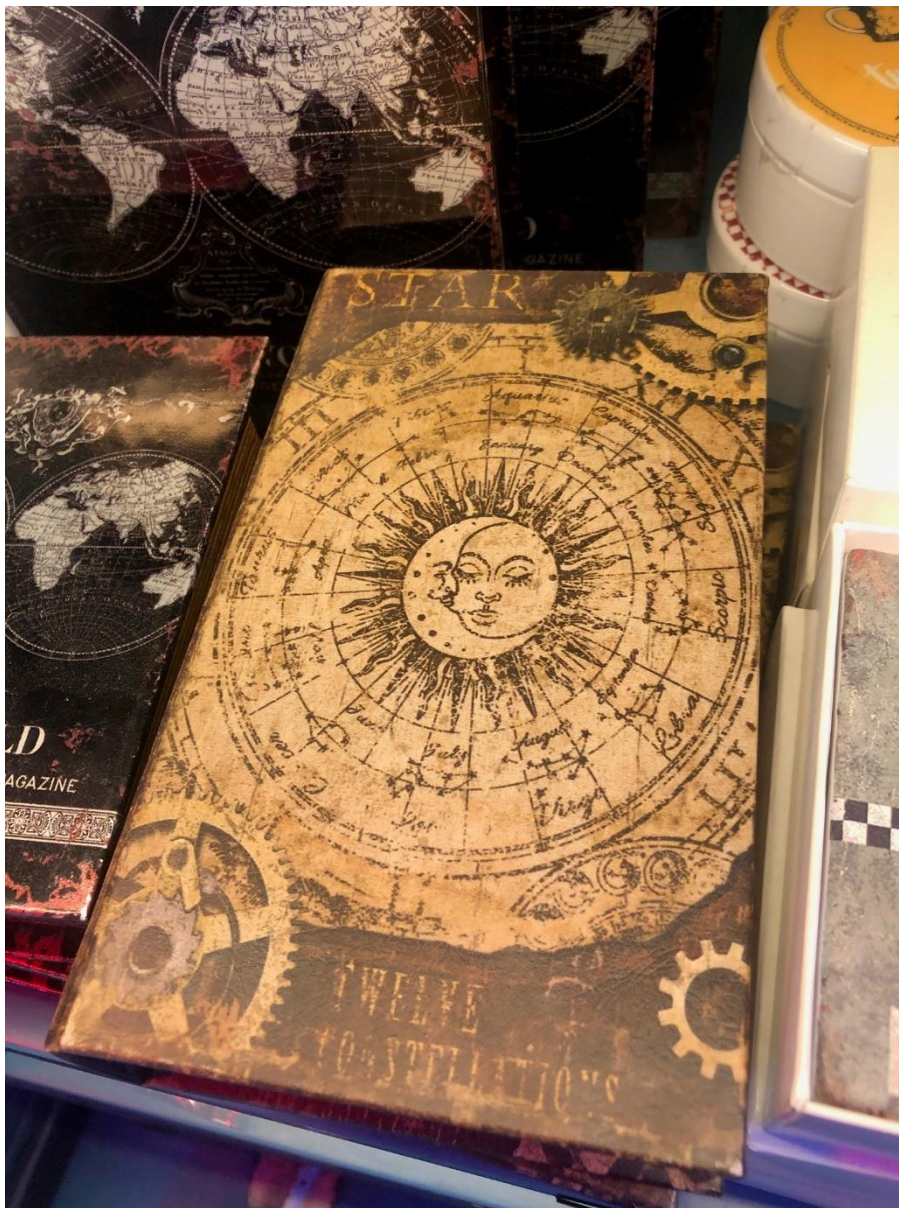

Inside the shop I find these incense sticks with Shiva on the cover of the box:

As I discover the Shiva-item, I think to myself: "This is a clue. There must be something else for me in here". I then find this container box, that looks like a book, with the text "Twelve constellations" printed in the bottom on the front cover.

I open it:

A container for keys? Libra is one of the twelve star constellations in the Zodiac, and the box is a container for a star key connected to Libra?

I need to find the Libra star key.

Sunday, April 2, 2023.

The Hollywood Symphony Orchestra that I have a ticket to, is cancelled. I arrive at the concert hall Palau de la Musica and as I'm about to enter the building I'm told the bad news. I am so disappointed. Everyone who has a ticket can get their money back and receive a free tour of the concert hall. I am so disappointed. I say yes to get a free tour, but I am so disappointed.

Afterwards, I'm walking the streets of Barcelona. I see this poster with the headline "Wolf", which I connect to wolf lady Nana:

Here I am – I look like an agent on a secret mission, right?

Inside a bookstore I find the following book interesting: “Keys from the Golden Vault”. I read the title as “Keys to the Golden Vault”. I buy the book with cash - with the money that I got back from the cancelled concert.

I have found the Libra star key?
